Vivah is a Hindi film in the romantic genre, written by Neeraj Kaun and produced in 2011. It stars Tusshar Kapoor and Soha Ali Khan as lead characters with veteran actor Vinay Pathak. The movie revolves around a young couple from two different castes who fall in love against the backdrop of their respective traditional family backgrounds. The story focuses on their struggle to get married, which leads them both into deep troubles and causes them to go through many ups and downs before ultimately winning love over tradition. Vivah has been critically acclaimed for its realistic portrayal of modern day India through its story of caste-based discrimination and gender inequality. The film has been screened at the 2011 IIFA Film Festival, and received several accolades for its quality. Vivah is a family drama based on the love story between Ranvir (Tusshar Kapoor) and Madhu (Soha Ali Khan). Madhu is married into a "jat" family, one of the three major castes in the Indian subcontinent. Ranvir is an "araiya" caste, belonging to throngs of business people who are regarded as somewhat untouchable by India's social hierarchy. Madhu's mother Rani (Kulbhushan Kharbanda) wants her to marry whoever her father chooses for her, but she falls in love with Ranvir. In the process of eloping with him, she ends up in a lot of trouble. The cast includes Kulbhushan Kharbanda, Vinay Pathak, Tusshar Kapoor and Soha Ali Khan.
